Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

If you happen to pick up this newspaper and find the editor giving a shellacking to Professor Rexford G. Tugwell because the Professor is always talking about "the economic waste" of advertising—you will probably grin. It isn't your funeral. BUT, the Professor wipes that smile off your face quickly enough when he denounces "competitive enterprise" and ridicules "profit-seeking."

Prince Hides From Father; Plans to Marry Commoner

Sigvard and German Actress Arrive in London From Berlin

SWEDES ARE ANGRY

Royal Family Disowns Lad Who Took Blonde With Him

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Prince Sigvard of Sweden was in hiding in a small exclusive hotel on Piccadilly Circus Wednesday, steadfastly determined that royal displeasure shall not prevent him from marrying a commoner.

Erika Patzek, blonde German screen actress, presumably was not far away, awaiting a decision on whether there will be a wedding in defiance of the objections of the prince's grandfather, King Gustaf, and his father, Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf.

The elders are exhausting every effort to prevent the marriage of the young couple, who came here from Berlin.

Prince in Movies

BERLIN, Germany.—(AP)—Prince Sigvard, Duke of Uppland, second son of the Crown Prince of Sweden and now a movie director, was disowned Tuesday night by the royal house of Sweden for refusing to give up the girl he loves.

It was announced that King Gustaf and the prince's father opposed his marriage to Fräulein Erika Patzek, daughter of a Berlin businessman, who is an actress in the studios of the UFA Motion Picture Company here.

Swedish news agencies were instructed by the royal house in Stockholm to release the following statement:

"The Swedish News Agency has been authorized to state that Prince Sigvard, second son of the crown prince, arrived at London recently and there made preparations to marry a woman of German nationality. The prince took this step against the expressed will of the king and the crown prince. Prince Sigvard was born in 1907."

The 27-year-old prince has been working as a director for the UFA film company for several years under an assumed name.

Efforts to reach the prince and his bride-to-be were unavailing. Servants at the Patzek home said the family was away at the country estate.

It is reported here that the young couple intends to proceed to London where the marriage will take place.

Pette, Pretty

The actress was described by friends as diminutive and pretty. She is in her early twenties. Her father, who is well-to-do, resides in the fashionable Wilhelmsdorf district of Berlin. The prince lived here. He was well liked at the film studios for his modesty and demure behavior.

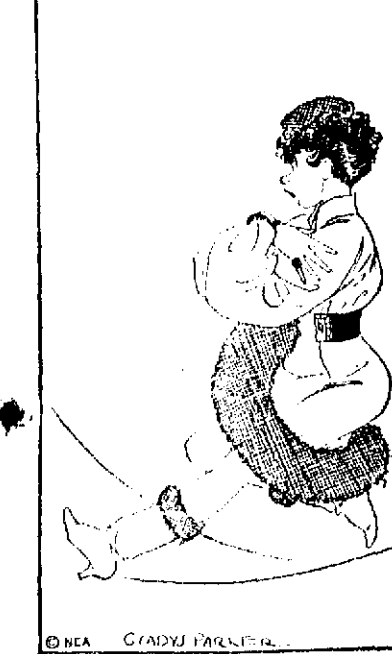

Swedish circles here say that a royal statement on the eve of a marriage of a member of the royal family means the prince is "cast out" of the family.

Anderson, Carrigan Win; Dr. Henry and Barlow in Runoff

All But Ward Three Aldermanic Contests Decided Tuesday

3 CORNERED FIGHT

Henry Leads Barlow and Martindale—Runoff March 27

Hope nominated five city officials and sent two other candidates into a run-off election for the sixth office, in Tuesday's preferential primary.

A total of 453 votes was polled, light even for the normally quiet off-year election.

In the three-cornered aldermanic race in Ward Three Dr. F. D. Henry obtained a commanding lead but fell short of a majority. The vote was: Dr. Henry 218; J. D. Barlow 125; Dr. Jim Martindale 106. Dr. Henry and Mr. Barlow will face each other in the run-off primary March 27.

In Ward One Roy Anderson, seeking re-election, defeated Dr. G. E. Cannon, 276 to 166.

In Ward Four, Dr. P. B. Carrigan won over C. E. Cassidy, 232 to 217.

L. A. Keith, alderman from Ward Two, was re-elected without opposition.

Also re-elected without opposition were: City Attorney W. S. Atkins and Clerk T. R. Billingsley.

Ginger Rogers, of Screen, Is Missing

Actress, Seeking Rest After 8 Pictures, Suddenly Disappears

HOLLYWOOD—(AP)—The sheriff's missing persons bureau was engaged Tuesday night in a two-state search for Ginger Rogers, titian-haired movie actress, whose whereabouts have been unknown since Saturday night.

In asking aid of authorities, the actress' mother, Mrs. Lena Rogers, said there is no alarming mystery concerning her daughter's disappearance. She said she wanted to locate Miss Rogers because a film studio is urgently in need of her for film work.

"Ginger left home Saturday night, telling me she was tired and needed a rest," the mother told the sheriff's office. "She didn't announce her destination as she said she wanted a complete rest, having made eight pictures in succession."

Arizona authorities were asked to aid in the search when Mrs. Rogers said she believed her daughter had left by airplane for a ranch "somewhere in either Arizona or Southern California."

To Visit Memphis on Airport Lease

City Council Orders Action and Votes Committee Expense Fund

Expenses were voted the airport committee for an immediate trip to Memphis to interview the president of the Union Compress & Warehouse Co. as to a long-term lease and option on part of the present airport property, by Hope city council at its meeting Tuesday night.

The airport committee is: R. L. Gosnell, L. A. Keith and W. A. Lewis. Tentative plans are to make the Memphis trip Thursday, it is understood, accompanied by members of the citizens' committee.

Hope is preparing to file a CWA airport project with federal authorities, the agreement being that if the city will provide the land under a 5-year lease with option to buy, the government will stand all the cost of developing a modern airport.

Newspaper Publisher Foils Kidnapers in Chicago Hotel Room

CHICAGO—(AP)—E. P. Elder, publisher of the Davenport (Ia.) Times and head of the Lee syndicate of newspapers, was attacked by two men in a hotel corridor Wednesday in an apparent attempt at kidnaping.

Slugged twice, Elder dodged the full effect of the blow and ran down the corridor from his room, eluding his assailants, one of whom was captured.

A trunk, perforated with air-holes, was found in a room adjoining Elder's.

The Lee syndicate owns 11 newspapers in Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois.

Adams Accused of Owing Air Stocks

Hoover Navy Secretary Held 500 Shares Douglas Aircraft Co.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The House naval committee learned Wednesday that Charles Francis Adams, secretary of the Navy from 1929 to 1932, owned 500 shares in Douglas Aircraft company on November 30, 1932.

Navy representatives had already shown that the Douglas company did more than a million dollars worth of business for the navy between 1930 and 1932.

Adams has accepted an invitation to appear before the committee, probably next week.

Brown and Black Clash

WASHINGTON—(AP)—In the course of a long verbal fencing match Tuesday, Walter F. Brown, former postmaster general, told Chairman Black of the air mail committee that the purpose of a gathering of air transport operators in Washington in 1930 was to determine their "equities" in air mail routes.

The basis for determination of these "equities" or rights, Brown said, was the pioneering development for aviation by the companies. He denied, however, that the air mail contracts were awarded on the basis of the findings and all Black's thrusts did not change that statement.

Once or twice both Brown and Black raised their voices so that the spectators leaned forward. Brown asked to testify after the Postoffice Department cancelled all domestic air mail contracts on the ground that they were awarded through collusion and fraud. The committee room was filled.

Would Aid Pioneers

"Wasn't determination of equities to determine also who would get the air mail contracts?" Brown asked, his voice sharp and loud.

Equally sharp and loud, Brown said "no."

Brown flung back that he had only in mind to aid aviation pioneers, if he could, and to carry out the purpose of the Waters air mail act.

Black later referred to "the plan" which guided the air mail meeting in May and June, 1930, and asked if it were not "so that what you term equities could be awarded without competitive bidding."

"That's correct," Brown said quietly. "That's what they wanted to do." Black observed that "the plan could not be carried out if the various operators tried to get a line which held equities belonging to other groups."

"Agreement on equities," Brown replied, "didn't mean there was any agreement on a plan for diversion of contracts." He added that the air transport operators had tried to establish among themselves who had "pioneering rights."

"I knew they couldn't," he said, "and that it would give me an excuse for chucking the whole plan."

"But they did agree in a good many instances," Black said.

"Very, very few," Brown told him.

Hearing on New Policy

During the day, the House Postoffice Committee headed by Representative Mead, Democrat, New York, began hearing on proposed permanent legislation for new awards of the cancelled air mail contracts.

Home-Building to Be Guaranteed in Part by U. S. Fund

Roosevelt Reporting Planning Special Message to Congress

HITS BOOTLEGGING

U. S. Probing Liquor Prices, and May Reduce Import Levy

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt is believed by his closest associates to be considering making a request of congress at this session to put the federal-financing spur behind home building.

Concerned with the problem of increasing employment in the capital goods industries, the president said Wednesday to believe that the program to be offered would not only be a constructive opportunity to help business but would be of invaluable social importance and would furnish an outlet for private capital.

Although legislation is now before congress to assist the home owner, the newer idea would call for the use of federal funds to put part of the risk of building homes on a mass basis on the government, which would assume a guarantee of part of the mortgage.

To Check Liquor

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt and his aides are concerned over the continued activity of bootleggers and are investigating the prices of legal liquor, the president revealed at his press conference Wednesday.

The administration is seeking to determine if there is a shortage of supplies necessitating high-priced liquors, against which considerable complaint has been made.

The suggestion has been offered that the United States should lower the tariff on liquor imports.

Whatever happens, it was emphasized that Mr. Roosevelt wants to put the bootleggers out of business. A serious study is in progress with that end in view.

The school will be in session the balance of this week. Greater interest is being manifested, and unlimited benefits are expected to result.

Jury Selection Slow

CHICAGO—(AP)—The work of selecting a jury for the second trial of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynkoop, alleged slayer of her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynkoop, on an operating table, ran into stormy seas Tuesday.

Two panels, the result of an extended morning session, were under bailiff guard, while defense and prosecution sought the final four jurors.

A final panel was tendered by the state but none of the veniremen met the approval of the defense.

Dr. Wynkoop, the 63-year-old defendant whose ill health necessitated a mistrial last month, sat during the long session without showing any ill effects. Her daughter, Dr. Catherine, occupied a chair only a few feet to the rear, beside her brother Walker.

Prosecutor Charles S. Dougherty's question to each juror, "have you conscientious scruples against the infliction of the death penalty in a proper case?" gave the only indication of the sanguinary nature of the case.

Most of the excused veniremen testified to having opinions on the guilt or innocence of the defendant.

Second Jury for Wynkoop Trial

Many of Veniremen Testify to Opinions as to Guilt or Innocence

CHICAGO—(AP)—A jury for the most part composed of youthful members was completed Wednesday for the second trial of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynkoop, accused of the murder of her daughter-in-law, Rheta.

The 63-year-old defendant said she felt "terrible" at the opening of her second trial.

The automobile of Cashier Wiseman, who was forced to open the bank's vault after a trio of robbers had spent the night at his home, was found a short distance from Georgetown.

Lum Vines, 40-year-old farmer of near Shover Springs, was near death in Josephine hospital Wednesday afternoon as the result of a horse-back accident in Hope.

Mr. Vines fell to the pavement on his face and head when the horse he was riding slipped. The accident occurred shortly after noon near Wyatt's Service Station on the north side of town.

Mr. Vines sustained a fracture of the skull and abrasions of the face. Physicians said at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon that there was little hope for his recovery.

Witnesses to the accident said Mr. Vines was unconscious when picked up from the pavement. The horse did not become frightened, but stood within a few inches of its master until led away.

Two years ago Mr. Vines' wife was accidentally killed on the streets here when struck by an automobile driven by John Hartsfield. The accident occurred in front of the Hope Furniture company store July 5, 1932.

Hartsfield was arrested and sentenced to prison as the result of her death.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

Senator Cutting Will Get Blessing of Democrats... Journey's a Big Ballyhoo Man... New Names Given to Whiskey... Peek Sits Ire of Cabinet Chiefs.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The next Republican senator to receive a Democratic blessing will be Senator Bronson M. Cutting of New Mexico.

Cutting, one of the outstanding progressives up for re-election this year, is about to be endorsed by Senator Carl A. Hatch, his Democratic colleague.

Such announcement by Hatch would be construed as a White House lead for the wealthy young Cutting, since New Mexico's Democratic senator maintains close relations with Postmaster General Jim Farley, Democratic national chairman.

Democratic endorsements of Republicans are a new departure in politics. The first one came recently, when Farley said he hoped Hiram Johnson would be returned to the Senate from California. Johnson, like Cutting, bolted Hoover for Roosevelt in the 1932 campaign.

Cutting has followings in both the Democratic and Republican parties of New Mexico. He controls his own Progressive party there. The state nominates candidates by political convention rather than primaries and it has been doubtful whether Cutting could get the regular Republican nomination again.

Roosevelt popularity might beat the regular C. O. P. candidate, anyway. Hence, Cutting might run this year on either the Democratic, Republican, or Progressive ticket—unopposed by Democrats if he ran as a Progressive.

Big Ballyhoo Man

Chesley Journey, the Senate sergeant-at-arms who has had such a hard time with Bill MacCracken, was successively secretary to former Senator Culberson of Texas and Senator Copeland of New York.

He ran unsuccessfully for Congress in Texas a couple of years ago, roaring around the state in a big, noisy ballyhoo bus which provided music along with speeches. As a senatorial secretary, the corpulent Mr. Journey always stood out from his brethren by reason of his constant affection of a frocktail coat, white-pipe vest, and broad-brimmed black Texas hat.

New Names for Whiskey

Quietly and almost unnoticed, the Federal Alcohol Control Administration has given the nation a new type of whiskey—new, at least, in name.

"Spirit whiskey" is the title and must be bottle-labeled on any mixture of whiskey and alcohol containing at least 5 per cent and less than 20 per cent of straight whiskey by volume.

Other whiskeys now recognized by law are "straight," "blended" and "imitation." "Blended" used to be a mixture of whiskeys, but may now be a mixture of whiskey and alcohol as long as it contains 20 per cent of "straight."

"Imitation" is what used to be known as rotgut—just alcohol, water, and flavoring. All other whiskeys must show the age on their labels.

Under the new regulations, "Old Kentucky" whiskey can't be made in Kentucky, Ill. The companies which claim a stage whiskey four years in 10 days must label their stuff "imitation whiskey."

They wouldn't give their secret away, so the FACA wouldn't expose them from that. But ginners won a point, in that synthetic gin may be labeled "compound gin" instead of "synthetic," as originally planned.

New Snag for Peek

Secretaries Wallace, Roper and Hull met to consider George N. Peek's report on how foreign trade should be developed. The session developed into an indignation meeting; the trio threw up its hands as one man. Peek, assigned by Roosevelt to study the possibilities after the left AAA, proposed to set up a foreign trade corporation under an administrator who would be second in power only to the president.

He would remove function after function from the State, Commerce, and Agriculture departments.

The Peek plan, if adopted, will be modified considerably. That might mean Peek's final departure from the government.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Feet, carefully shod in neat, shape shoes, are a foundation for beauty.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Order Is Key to Content—Character Depends on Family Habits of Regularity and Neatness

There is more to the saying that cleanliness is next to godliness than we think. In fact it has been translated to mean that godliness depends on cleanliness. More freely interpreted still, it means that character depends upon order.

This is an indisputable truth. Nothing is more conducive to a cluttered and than to live in a mess. When there is no place for anything, nothing is in its place, when there is no regular schedule and one lives in a hand-to-mouth manner, our very attitude to life assumes its grotesque colors. Our thinking and habits become ill-assorted and purposeless.

The child is more sensitive to these things than we realize. In fact so closely related is habit-of-living to character that it has been seized upon by educators to start the baby in its crib. Regular feeding time, regular bath time, regular bed time are not recommended for physical virtue alone, but to get expectancy and therefore acceptance of authority, which is the basis of all mental content.

Regularity Best Course

Every child of any age does better in an orderly home and under routine. He becomes sensitive to it and it should be continuous. Any interruption is likely to upset him because his body and his mind thus adjusted protest against change.

Occasionally parents revolt against the tyranny of regular hours and decide to "harden" the children. Nothing but trouble has resulted from such a source—juggling bed-time, hour or playing ball with meals. This has been the story of under-par children for many a year, both physically and characteristically.

Regularity does not always guarantee perfection, but there is little doubt that its opposite is responsible for difficulties in adjustment to authority.

What is true of time is true of other regimental conditions, order and neatness. Most American mothers are good housewives and have a well-developed sense of order, so the matter to be emphasized here is not how to keep house so much as to show its relationship to training.

Virtue of "System"

One thing cannot be overlooked, however. Many mothers who do their own work are irritable and worn out. Each day they face a new burden of work, and who can blame them? The attitude of mind wears out the body quite as much as the nerves. Yet it so happens that of two women with the same health capital and the same house and family and work, one will be able to manage quite well and even have free time, while her sister may be in a constant state of nerves and flurry.

Perhaps one has "system" or does not undertake impossible extras that keep her forever lagging. Or perhaps the first has trained her family to help, or gets up earlier, having retired in time to get plenty of sleep.

There must be a reason and it would be well for the discouraged to review her position and so if she cannot do better by another route.

She will be stronger and happier, and so will everybody about her, if the work can be dispatched on time. An unhappy and overworked mother will have neither health nor patience to bother about her children's problems. Furthermore, there will be more problems.

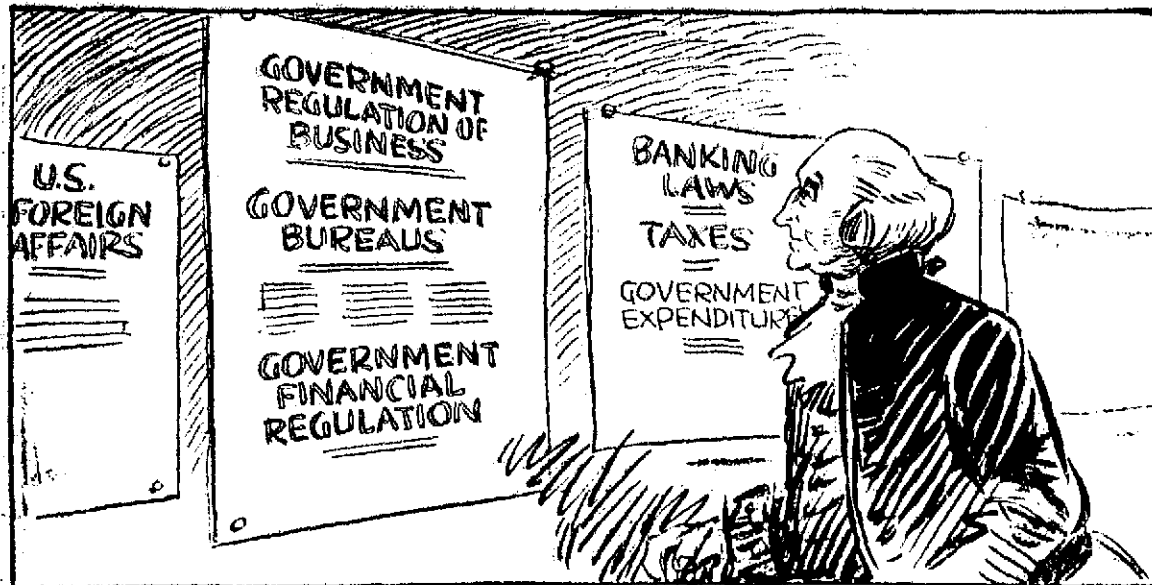

and grace—literally and figuratively. We wouldn't think of appearing in a dingy, dusty hat. Yet our shoes, which are just as important in the general scheme of fastidious grooming, are not always above reproach.

First of all, consider the question of shoe trees. You should have a pair for each pair of shoes. And insert them just the minute you remove your shoes. They help shoes to retain their shape.

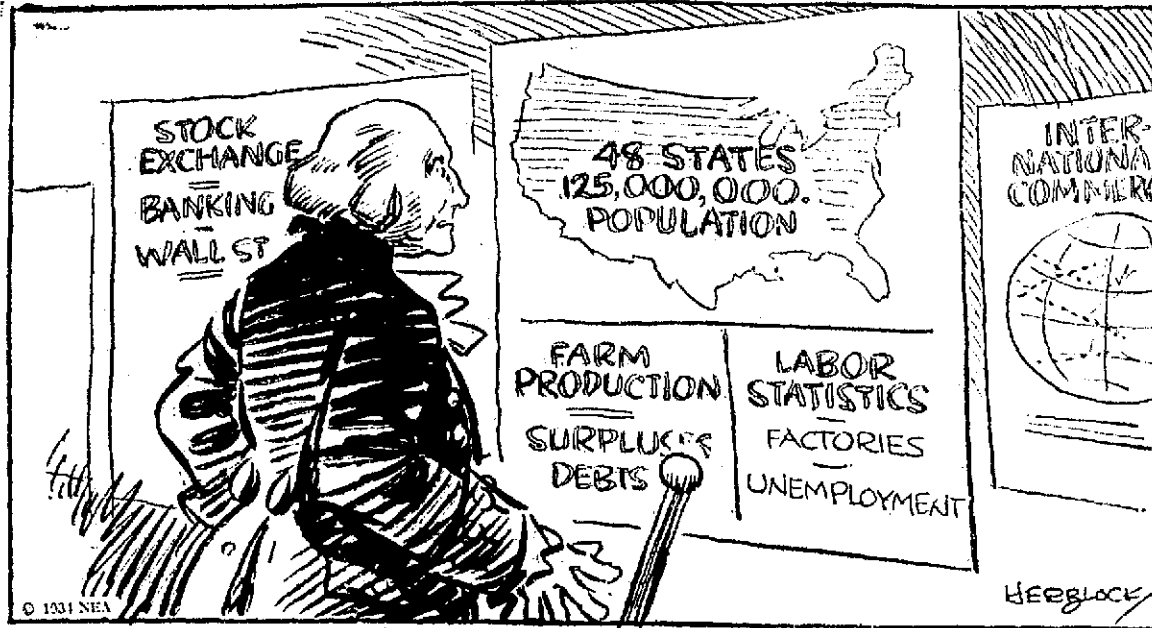

Then there are little satin sachet bags for the toes of your party slippers. Put in shoe trees, leave your shoes in the air (sunshine preferably) and when they are quite dry, remove the shoe trees and put in the sachet bags. You should have little shoe bags for party pumps and see that they close tightly enough to keep out all dust.

Of course you get a shine once or twice a week, but do you dust your shoes each time you take them off? You should. Suede shoes need to be brushed daily. There are little steel brushes for that purpose. If you don't like a steel brush, there are special suede cleaners in tubes and bottles.

If Washington Could Come Back

HE MIGHT BE SURPRISED TO SEE THESE THINGS—BUT

HE MIGHT BE EVEN MORE SURPRISED TO SEE THESE!

(BIRTHDAY FEBRUARY 22)
AN EDITORIAL BY BRUCE CATTON

Celebration of Washington's birthday this year is likely to result in some rather far-fetched attempts to figure out just how the father of his country would react to the new deal, if he could come back to earth and draw a hand in it.

Such attempts are far-fetched because those who make them have nothing to go on. The world of today is as unlike the world that Washington knew as the world of the Caesars.

We can say, if we like, that Washington would feel this and so about railroad mergers, crop reduction plans, stock exchange regulation, and Tennessee Valley projects—but if we do, we shall be talking through our hats, because all those things were completely outside the range of his experience.

It might be more useful if we stopped figuring out how Washington would react to modern problems and began to wonder how we ourselves would react to Washington.

Any national leader can be great only to the extent that the people he leads give him their support—their courage, their endurance, their loyalty. Washington's greatness consisted largely in the fact that he was able to find those qualities in abundance in the disgruntled and bewildered colonies of his day.

Had he been unable to do so, independence never would have been won—and he himself probably would have wound up on a gallows on London's Tower Hill. Suppose, then, that he did come back to lead us today—would he find us the kind of people a great leader can use?

Would we be too wrapped up in the scramble for personal gain to listen to him? Would we be too busy with our pleasant diversions—our sports and our recreations, our baseball and our movies and our week-end auto trips—to bother with a man who sought to command all our loyalty and faith and steadfastness?

Would we, in short, be the kind of men Washington commanded in the old days—or would he look us over, and shake his head, and sigh for the ragged, profane veterans of Valley Forge?

Those questions really are worth asking. Usually we observe Washington's birthday by comparing him with our present-day leaders. It would be a lot more to the point if we used the chance to compare ourselves with the men Washington led. Are we as good men as they are?

If we aren't, we'd better start to change. For if the present hour, as everybody says, calls for great leadership—it also calls for great followers.

Concrete Basin Will Put Finishing Touch to Beautiful Back Yard Garden

Plans for construction of a garden pool—cross-section through the pool, at top; plan or design, below.

This is the ninth of a series of articles by Donald Gray, famous landscape consultant, on how to make a beautiful garden of your back yard.

By DONALD GRAY

NEA Service Landscape Consultant

Much of the charm of a garden is due to water in the form of a pool or a reflecting basin, and the easiest and most economical way to have such a pool is to make it yourself.

If the sides are sloping, instead of perpendicular, you need build no wooden form, and you can make a substantial non-leaking basin very easily by following the simple instructions given here.

The shape and size depends on your individual taste and the space available. The pool may have a stone coping or be built so that the grass comes to the edge of the water. If a grass edge is desired, leave the top of concrete sides three inches below surrounding grade.

Use the garden hose to make an outline on the ground. Mark the edge with a spade and begin cutting the earth away on the inside. Keep the sides sloping—remember, the outside earth is the form against which the concrete has to fit.

The dimensions of depth shown on the sketch will permit the growing of water lilies. This means the dug cut space must be 27 inches at its deepest point, with all sides sloping towards that point.

After all earth is removed, place lining pegs in the ground so that their tops are six inches above three inches of cinders. This will guide you for the thickness of the concrete.

Place a one-inch elbow, preferably of brass, at the bottom of the excavation so that its top is in line with the surface of the finished concrete. Run a line of one-inch copper pipe out through one side of the pool. Later connect this pipe into a drain or into a dry well.

The height of the water is regulated by the upright length of the pipe that screws into this elbow. By unscrewing the upper pipe, the pool can be drained.

A strainer can be put on the exposed end of pipe. For water supply, bring a three-quarter-inch line to the edge of the pool after the concrete is poured.

Prepare concrete: One part cement, two parts sharp sand and three and one-half parts gravel. Mix with water, but not too thin. Tamp neatly in place and be sure that it is six inches deep over the entire area.

Pull out wooden pegs and let concrete dry. Do it all in one operation.

NEXT: How to plant a tree.

Old houses, like old gentlefolk, are shy. For shabbiness and quaint old-fashioned ways mark them the relics of those other days. Before men worshipped speed's efficiency. They seem to sit apart, to draw aside from life's insistent urge. In musings deep they dream: and tender rendezvous they keep. With all the treasured memories they hold. A footstep... whispers... scent of rare perfume... An old love song... faint rustle of a gown... A sobbing cry... gay laughter drifting down... These are the substance of long-lived rooms. Old houses, like old hearts, are loath to tell. Dear secrets they have hidden long and well.—Selected.

Mrs. Otis Park of Fulton was the Wednesday guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Cornelius.

A most attractive luncheon party of Tuesday was that of Mrs. Clyde Hill who gathered a group of her girlhood friends of former Washington days for lunch and an informal tea for the afternoon, at her home on North Pine street. The beautifully appointed table was centered with a handsome centerpiece filled with spring's loveliest blossoms, jonquils predominating encircled with silver candlesticks in which burned yellow tapers; daintily placed cards with a single jonquil completed the appointments. The guests for this charming occasion were: Mrs. W. H. Eakin, Texarkana; Mrs. Arthur Allen, Duncen, Colo.; Mrs. Steve Mulkey, Little River Country Club; Mrs. H. H. Smiley, Mrs. Homer Carpenter, Mrs. M. F. Morgan, Mrs. Hugh Lowthorp, Mrs. Stuart Wilson, Mrs. W. B. Oglesby, Mrs. James Dawson, Mrs. J. R. Dodson and Miss Allie Johnson all of Texarkana. During the afternoon a number of old Washington and Hope friends were invited to meet the guests and the hour was spent in renewing old friendships and talking over the days of Auld Lang Syne. A most delightful salad course was served with tea.

On Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the First Presbyterian church a prayer service will be observed for schools and colleges and a free will offering will be taken for Arkansas College, at Batesville.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Finley and Mrs. Clyde Hill have as guest for this week, Mrs. Arthur Allen of Denver, Colo.

On Thursday evening at 7:15 at the Masonic Hall there will be a rehearsal of the officers of Chapter 328, O. E. S., completing arrangements for the annual visit of the Worthy Grand Matron, Mrs. Louisa Corwell on Saturday evening February 24.

Mrs. Garrett Story is spending a few days visiting in Texarkana, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Duke.

Misses Harriet Story, Guila Bayse and Mary Louisa Keith, with Mrs. J. W. Wilborn accompanying were recently invited by the Magnolia A. & M. to sponsor a chapel program in the college.

Misses Callie and Sue Wesson have as guests this week, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Burleson of Fayetteville and Mrs. Lily Sawyer of Stephens.

Professor Tugwell has discovered anything new or startling in his idea of "the planned economic state."

It's a very old idea. Thousands of years ago men dreamed of a Utopian state.

Various Utopias have come down to us in books, but in one respect they are all alike—they suppose a civilization in which men shall live almost without working.

Men do not like to work. Am I telling you anything?

And in your America, whatever you think of her today, men have lived better and been compelled to work less, than in any other civilization of which there is record in history.

Professor Tugwell tells me nothing new. Twelve years ago, the winter of 1921-22, I took the New York subway down to an East Side high school to hear a debate between Scott Nearing, Philadelphia Socialist, and Professor Walter B. Pitkin of the Pulitzer School of Journalism, Columbia university.

The reason I attended the debate was that I studied under Professor Pitkin and several of us energetic young scholars made the trip hoping to see the Socialist terror "smear" the Professor.

Alas—there is a great deal of difference between writing something down on paper, where it is plain and clear, and defending it in a public debate, where troublesome questions are asked.

In my opinion—and I was prejudiced against him—Professor Pitkin, arguing the case for private capital, defeated the Socialist Nearing, who was upholding Professor Tugwell's theory of "the planned economic state."

Here's what happened: After Pitkin and Nearing had quarreled for a couple of hours with arguments and rebuttals and counter-rebuttals, Pitkin summarized about like this:

My opponent says he has a plan that will make society perfect. Nobody knows whether it will or not. Nobody knows whether society in fact can be made perfect at all. Mr. Nearing and I will probably agree to disagree on this proposition: We live in a world of chance. What success we obtain, he says is due to a conceived plan of action. I deny that. I say that everything is a shot in the dark—and an occasional stroke reaches the goal that men are seeking.

All this sounds like 1934. But I heard it in a crowded East Side high school auditorium in New York City twelve years ago.

The things that Nearing and Tugwell advocates are in the public eye today.

They are debated, not in an obscure schoolroom, but in the halls of congress.

Does it disturb you? It shouldn't. The American people, from the president on down, will listen to the full debate, take out and save that part which common sense recommends, and the rest they will throw away.

ADAMS ACCUSED
their purchasing power, and that if we had sat around like Buddha, lamas contemplating a lily bud to attain perfection by conjecture before action, none of these results would have been achieved," he said. "The ultimate aim is to have the industrial control organization spread out like the keyboard of a piano wherein by concert of action economic harmony can at least be had."

ASSAULT PUBLISHER
He combined his demand for facts and figures with a sledge-hammer attack on muckrakers and the "highly perfumed conjecture of some pundit who never did anything in his life but read some books and write others," likening the latter to the "mail order and correspondence school cowboy."

"A conspicuous recent instance is by a writer who dared not sign his name to his strictures and advanced as a reason the astonishing statement that these men (officials of whom he wrote) are his friends and that if they knew that it was he who is assailing their reputations, he might lose their regard."

"This writer in whose veins there must flow something more than a trace of rodent blood, exalts some who are weak and throw mud at some who are strong for no other apparent reason than to provide salable copy. All this is published by a dying newspaper, recently purchased at auction by an Old Dealer—a cold-blooded reactionary—who was one of the principal guides along the road to disaster of 1925. And the object of its purchase must have been nothing less than what it is doing now—to attack men for the purpose of destroying measures."

The reference was to the Washington Post, currently carrying an anonymous serial on chief personalities of the Roosevelt administration. The paper is owned by Eugene Meyer, governor of the Federal Reserve Board under the Hoover administration.

NRA SEEKS

William I. Denning, representing Braniff Airways, said his concern was anxious to have the right to compete for contracts in open bidding. Braniff operates a passenger plane service between Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Kansas City, St. Louis and Chicago in competition with lines having air mail contracts.

Mead said he was certain carrying the air mail would be turned back to private companies and expressed hope that the contracts would be let on a poundage basis instead of space basis.

Parables, M. E. Topic at Prayer Meeting

Married Flirts

MOON HIDE TODAY

GIPSY MORELL and TOM WEAVER are married on the eve of the LEA HOTALING and DEREK BLISS, but while Lila lives in luxury Gypsy has to struggle to keep expenses within Tom's income.

After Gypsy's son is born he days before a dreary sound of crying for him and for her home. She suspects Tom is interested in VERA GRAY who works in the same office.

Lila divorces Derek. Vera finds excuses to see Tom ten or one night, after tricking him into taking her home, suggests they run away together. Tom leaves hastily.

Derek, learning Lila divorced him to marry MARTIN BRIDGINGTON, richer and older, comes uninvited to a dinner party given by Lila. Gypsy is there and also HUNT GIBSON, Derek who has been drinking, falls from a balcony to the street.

Tom takes Gypsy home. Tom, jealous and angry, makes a scene. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLII

NOW the storm which had been threatening all the long evening began in real earnest. The lightning flashed. The heavens trembled under the onslaughts of fierce, shattering peals of thunder. Gypsy shivered, not only because of the storm but because of Tom's last words and the baleful expression he now bent upon her.

"I'm tired," she repeated. "I've had a dreadful time of it. Can't you see that? That awful scene with Derek. . . . She shut her eyes.

"Don't try to turn me aside," Tom said bleakly. "I want to know what there is between you and Gibson?"

She stared at him. "You know there's nothing at all. . . .

"Ah, but do it only today, Vera. . . . He checked himself, but she had caught the name.

"Do you mean to say you discuss me with that woman?"

He had the grace to flush, to answer honestly. "Of course, I don't. What do you take me for? But she said something. . . .

Gypsy felt her temples pounding. There was the beat of slow anger in her blood. Vera. . . . Vera. . . . when would this woman's name cease to enrage her?

In measured accents she asked, "You were with her tonight then? At dinner, perhaps?"

Tom, made to feel in the wrong, goaded to furious retaliation, shouted, "No, not at dinner. I might have dined with her but no—like a fool, I was being faithful even in spite of you. I acted like a blithering idiot and she's a nice girl, too. Simple and direct and honest. . . .

"Hal I like that!" Gypsy said bitterly.

"You leave her out of this. She's got nothing to do with us. The facts are that you've been out at a wild party with this man till all hours. I'm sick of it. We might as well admit we're finished. There's no use going on. And now this last hideous mess—to have your name dragged through a scandal! I tell you I'm not having any more of it. I'm getting out."

She drew herself up. "You can't talk to me like this," she said, her voice shaking. "If you walk out of that door now it will be the end of everything for us."

His hand was on the knob. His face was white with anger. They were like two foes locked in deadly combat. Neither would give an inch. One gesture, one look might have saved them both. Neither would offer it.

THEN suddenly it was all over. As the thunder crackled and roared and the flashes of light flickered on and off the door slammed. Gypsy stood unmoving. It was all a bad dream, she kept telling herself. The whole thing—the dinner and Derek's accident and the quarrel . . . everything. Presently she would wake up and find herself in her own small bed and Tom asleep opposite, his arms flung over his head.

But the clock ticked on inexorably, the rumble of the storm continued, and when she flung the door wide only emptiness greeted her. He had really and truly gone.

She went back into the apartment and stared around her. It was all over, their life together. The plans, the laughter over budgets and books, the kisses, the promises, the shared delights.

"Well, that's that," she said flatly in the silence. It wasn't that she hadn't honestly and sincerely tried to make a go of it but she had failed, even as Lila had. Maybe marriages weren't meant to succeed nowadays. If you went at them in the old-fashioned way (as she had) determined to work and save and cleave to one man, you bored him. If you behaved as Lila had you crashed up in more spectacular fashion.

The crisis left her light-headed. She moved quietly about, undressing, so as not to disturb the baby. Her mind felt light and free now, quite apart from her body. She would have to make plans. She would have to spare her family. Daddy. . . . It was a long time later—an hour perhaps—after she had crept into bed that she began to cry.

"It can't happen as simply as this," she said to herself. "Oh, Tommy—Tommy!"

THE day dawned bright, smiling, clean washed after the rain. There were things to do, to keep hand and heart busy. Thank God, thought Gypsy dully, remembering Lila, for things to do. Breakfast to get. Orange juice and cereal and toast and milk for David. She could not eat—she simply could not eat. And bathing David. And waiting, with a sort of stricture at her heart, for the telephone to ring.

But Tom did not call. Not all through the morning. Elsa came and Gypsy sent her out with the baby in his cab. She made beds and dusted, all with a sick heart. Once she called the hospital where Derek had been taken and she was told his condition was the same. "No change," said the dispassionate voice at the third floor desk. Hunt telephoned and, in an apologetic tone, said he was sorry if he had butted in last night. Gypsy assured him it was quite, quite all right. She understood. They had all been a little crazy last night, she said, and laughed shakily. Hunt had gone on to say he was lunching with Sue. Thank the Lord, he added with apparent irrelevance, the mess had been kept out of the papers. Gypsy had seen suddenly and clearly what he had meant her to see. He was perfectly willing to play around with a young married woman, beau her to parties, even hold her hand a moment too long at parting, so long as it didn't involve him any further.

"I don't blame him a bit," Gypsy said, of Hunt. Just the same her heart felt sore.

Of Tom she simply refused to think. They had quarreled before, naturally; but not like this. He would think things over presently. He would be sorry. She would not forgive him at once. He hadn't meant it. . . . or had she? How was she to get through the day?

She called her mother and learned that Daddy had taken his first walk completely alone that morning.

"We plan to go up to that place in the Alhambra next week," the pleasant voice said. "We thought you and Tom might like to stay in the house. It's cool and quiet."

Somehow Gypsy managed to answer normally. She and Tom . . . next week! How was she to know what next week would bring? Yesterday the plan would have delighted her. But now—

"I'll let you know," she promised. Somehow she must keep the knowledge of her personal disaster from them. They must not be worried just now.

SHE dressed carefully and went first to Lila's apartment about two o'clock. Mrs. Bliss was not seeing anyone. Daria told her with a concerned face. There was a trained nurse. They were giving her opiates. Mrs. Bliss had been hysterical. . . .

Gypsy went out into the warm, bright sunshine dazedly. Derek dying, Lila frantic, herself all at sea. What a topsy-turvy world!

She kept herself busy somehow. When Elsa brought the smiling and slightly wilted baby back Gypsy had the apartment cool and shaded and dim. Mr. Weaver would not be home for dinner until late. Gypsy announced. Anyhow this was one of Elsa's "early" nights. So the maid went away and, in the street far below, one could hear the wild shouting of children and the scream of taxi brakes. A city apartment is a desolate place of a summer evening.

Gypsy felt it now as never before. After she had got the baby to bed she sat quite alone in the living room, watching the shadows creep slowly on the wall of the courtyard opposite.

"What am I going to do?" she asked herself over and over again. "What am I going to do?"

She glanced at the clock. It was half-past 7. There was still time for Tom to return. Every step in the hall might be his. Every hurrying taxi below in the street might be bringing him, penitent and loving. But she waited long and hope died.

There was one more course open to her now. She might call the office—very often the men worked late in this season—and ask for him. At least then she would know where he stood. Her pride balked at the notion, but anxiety triumphed and at last she gave the number and sat tensely waiting.

There was no answer from the general switchboard, but she had expected that. The operators did not work after 6 o'clock. A long, persistent buzzing. Finally a receiver, somewhere in the great bare stretch of offices, was lifted and a male voice said, "Hello."

Gypsy could hear her heart pounding, pounding. The voice was not Tom's. "Is Mr. Weaver there?"

A pause and the unseen speaker shouted to someone in the room. "How about Weaver? See him any place?"

Gypsy waited. It seemed to her she lived a year in those few seconds.

The voice came close again. "Sorry," it said. "He seems to have lit out."

"Thank you!"

"Any message?"

"No, there's none." She was just about to ring off when the voice said quickly, "Hold on, they say he's—what's that? Oh, yes, he's gone out of town. Don't know when he'll be back."

Roosevelt Signs Newspapers' Code

Papers Must Choose Either ANPA or Graphic Arts Divisions

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—In approving the newspaper publishers' code President Roosevelt made a request Monday that papers with more than 75,000 circulation in cities of 750,000 or more place their news staffs immediately on a five-day 40-hour week basis.

The president's executive order required that a study be made within 60 days to determine permanent policy on the employment of children as delivery boys and paper salesmen, and a further study to establish hour provisions for the editorial staffs of all newspapers.

In accepting the code, the president said he was "dissatisfied" with its child labor provisions, which provide that boys under 16 may sell papers out of school hours between 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. in winter time and 7 a. m. and 8 p. m. in summer.

The report on both questions will be made by Administrator Hugh S. Johnson rather than independently by the American Newspaper Publishers' association, proponents of the code.

As for the publishers' declaration for freedom of the press the president said he was allowing it to remain because "it has no meaning," and observed that it was "pure surplusage."

Of the publishers' reservation that they would not accept any modification of the code by the president, he said that "of course a man does not consent to what he doesn't consent to."

The president then proceeded to assert this did not in any way affect his powers under the section of the industrial law which permits him to impose codes.

This policy has not been resorted to under NRA but the right to do so has not been surrendered by the administration.

Of the reference to freedom of the press the president also said: "Recitation of the freedom of the press clause has no more place here than would a recitation of the whole of the constitution or of the ten commandments."

"The freedom guaranteed by the constitution is the freedom of expression and that will be scrupulously respected—but it is not freedom to work children, or do business in a fire trap or violate the laws against obscenity, libel and lewdness."

Administrator Johnson, presenting the chief executive's order to newsmen Monday, explained that while all newspapers were free to come under the ANPA code without any requirement of that association, all those who did not specifically subscribe to it would be under the National Editorial Association section of the graphic arts code, which was approved Saturday.

The two codes, he explained, however, would be made substantially identical as to labor provisions, wages and hours for all departments.

Johnson also pointed out that while the regulation of child labor in the ANPA code affected the children employed directly by the papers, it would not reach those employed by news paper distributing agencies for whom no code had been presented.

While the hours of street sales by children are expressly limited there is no limitation on time for home deliveries except that it shall not impair the health of the boys nor interfere with day school hours.

Italy May Break With Nazi Leader

Rift Looms With Germany After Sabotaging of Austria

ROME.—(AP)—Possibility of a break over Austria between Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany foreseen by many observers, was emphasized Monday by an editorial attack on Berlin by the newspaper Giornale D'Italia.

"There now is no longer any doubt," said the newspaper, "that the government of the National Socialist movement (Nazi) which exploded in Austria in violent form is inspired by Germanic elements."

"Their headquarters are in fact in Berlin and Munich, their chief organizers are among the highest personalities in the German political world."

"Explosives and arms which have made victims in Austria have come in part from Germany. Combat squads which are operating and which still operate in Austria territory for National Socialist have been in part maintained and educated in Germany."

The paper was replying to attacks from the German press directed against Italy as a result of the declaration by Rome, France and Great Britain that Austrian independence must be preserved.

"The frequent radio broadcasts and common language of German newspapers defaming the government of Chancellor Dollfuss," said the Giornale D'Italia, "have reached the point where they are fraternizing in these days with the Red press of the Second International."

These facts confirm the solidarity which exists in some Germanic quarters with opposition to the government of Dollfuss. It is now beyond doubt that this Austro-German movement is tending to prepare gradually but inevitably the political union of Austria and Germany."

VIENNA, Austria.—(AP)—The Austrian government sent another Socialist—the eighth—to the gallows for insurrectionary activities Monday night and took to pieces the monument to the republic—for transport to the municipal museum.

First, bus after bus with bayonet-bearing police was rushed to the spot near the Parliament where the polished granite memorial to the republic and its founder stood.

Parliament, itself, was "sent to a museum" almost a year ago by Chancellor Dollfuss, but its beautiful building, erected under the old imperial regime, stood just as it was when the little chancellor drove its deputies out with a few score plain-clothed policemen.

The monument to the republic, however, honored three Socialist leaders of the 1918 revolution—Victor Adler, Jakob Reumann and Ferdinand Hanusch—and removal of their offending bronze statues became inevitable the day an armed uprising of the Republican Guard was crushed last week.

Neither official, nor semi-official, comment was forthcoming Monday night, regarding the ultimatum of Theodore Habicht, adviser of the Austrian Nazi party, that if the government does not reply satisfactorily to a Nazi offer of co-operation the "fight" will be resumed in eight days.

Persistent Headaches Require Expert Care.

If you are a normal person you perhaps realize that there are all sorts of causes for headaches, and you undoubtedly know many methods of treatment.

The majority of headaches are not extremely troublesome. They come on suddenly, last a short time, and go away. There are, however, some forms, known as migraine, which hang on and which are associated with such a sense of sickness that they incapacitate you wholly for comfortable and happy living.

Migraine headache seems to run in families and to be associated perhaps with structural defects of the brain. For this reason it is difficult to promise an absolute cure in any case.

Many of these patients think the disturbance is connected with digestion, and go to a specialist in diseases of the stomach, with the idea that he will find the seat of the disturbance in some disorder of the stomach or intestines.

Occasionally cases seem related to the eyes, and the proper fitting of glasses brings some relief.

In women, changes which take place periodically may seem to be the basis of the attacks. These women frequently go to bed for a week because the combination of conditions is too much for them.

Altogether it would seem that anything tending to increase the irritability of the brain will bring on an attack.

Overwork, excitement, worry, loss of sleep, fits of anger, maladjustment in domestic relations frequently are responsible. What the patient needs under these circumstances is mental rather than physical attention.

In some cases a special sensitivity to some food seems to be responsible. In these cases, the victim should stop

Says Black-Draught "Sure Worth Price"

"I take Theodor's Black-Draught when I get bilious," writes Mr. L. O. Miller, of Henryetta, Okla., "and it keeps me from having headache which usually comes from biliousness. If I don't take it, I feel dull and sluggish. I just have to take Black-Draught once in a while. I haven't found anything more satisfactory. It is sure worth the price."

Children like the new, pleasant tasting SYRUP of Black-Draught.

30 Days That Rocked the Nation

Reviewing the Crash—One Year After

Distinguished appearing Charlie Mitchell of the National City bank told a gasping stock market investigating committee that he had received from the bank some $2,500,000 in two years.

First of a breath-taking revelation were to come, Mitchell's testimony caused a sensation.

New York state came out with a model beer control plan, and other states rushed to follow suit.

Senator La Follette, who had been making a point of 800 cities, reported that one of them answered that they would have to have federal aid if they were to carry on their relief work and escape disaster.

A book was published by W. W. Waters, leader of the bonus march, in which he confessed that the march was one of general dissatisfaction with the way things were going, and that few of the marchers really expected to get the bonus.

Meanwhile, professors of 68 colleges were submitting to President-elect Roosevelt a plan for a national council to co-ordinate industry. Rebels were fighting with government troops near Guantanamo, Cuba, and the Machado grip tightened.

And the House adopted the Senate's proposal to give the incoming president extraordinary powers to reorganize the executive departments in Washington.

It was the last Lane Duck Congress, a confession that it could not itself wield the economy ax. And perhaps it paved the way for the extraordinary powers which the incoming Congress was to vote so promptly to FDR.

The stock market closed weak, and one observer wrote that "there seem to be rumors of something dire overhanging the market."

NEXT: The new engine.
